Abstract/Brief Summary of the Invention:
Give an overview of the invention's concept and chief objective(s) or purpose(s).
Introduction/Background of the Invention:
Give context to the invention. Describe the field(s) to which the invention pertains and the developments that led to the invention.
Detailed Description of the Invention:
Give a thorough description of the invention as well as how it is made/executed and used. The description should be so detailed that a person skilled in the field would be able to make and use the invention as a result of reading it. Please be as clear, exact and thorough as possible in your description, and please be sure to clearly identify which element of your research is "the invention."

Figures and Descriptions:
If you wish to submit documents, presentations, figures, charts or other supporting materials, please list them here and include them with this disclosure.
Non-Confidential Common of the Invention
Non-Confidential Summary of the Invention: This should be one to two paragraphs in length and should not contain any proprietary information. The non-confidential summary should include an overview of the invention and its impact/commercial potential and may be shared with companies interested in licensing the rights to the invention.
Novel Aspects of the Inventions Novel Aspects of the Invention: Specifically identify those properties of the invention (or the process by which it is made or used) that are novel and that distinguish it from existing technologies.
Advantages Over Current Technology and Impact:
Please identify the invention's advantages over existing alternative products, processes or services.

elated Publications: ease describe the invention's commercial potential, in terms of potential products and services, and describe its impetition/available alternatives. ease list any papers, patents and other published material that you are currently aware of that either relate to your invention of scribe similar technology.
